Problem and product

Hollis Voice

The problem

- Front desks are busy with people at the counter, so calls go to voicemail.
- A pet owner who cannot get through calls the next clinic.
- Clinics lose appointments and refill requests they never see.

The product

- Hollis Voice answers every call, day and night.
- It books the appointment into the clinic's calendar.
- It sends refill requests to staff to approve.
- It texts the pet owner a confirmation.

Example call, Tuesday 4:47 pm

Caller: Hi, I need to refill my dog's heart medicine.

Hollis Voice: Happy to help. Which pet is it for?

Caller: Biscuit, the beagle.

Hollis Voice: Thanks. I sent the refill request to the clinic staff and will text you when it is ready.

Answering services

People read a script and take a message. No booking, no refills.

For example:
Ambs Call Center, Specialty Answering Service

Generic AI receptionists

Built for any business. They do not know a vet clinic's calls.

For example:
Dialzara, MyAIFrontDesk

Practice software add-ons

Tied to one system and rarely answer the phone well.

For example:
VetRec AI Receptionist

Hollis Voice

Built for vet clinics: vaccine reminders, refills and emergency routing.
